Creek Surfing and Polin form artificial surf alliance

The Hungarian-based Creek Surfing company has teamed up with Turkish company Polin Waterparks and Pool Systems to market and distribute the former's new water activity concept.

Creek Surfing is a new activity resembling skiing and snowboarding. It can be integrated into waterparks and/or amusement parks or can be a stand alone attraction.

The concept is based on a system of plastic bands placed horizontally on a base plate to form parallel 'micro-terraces'. In operation, water is pumped up to the top of the creek, and then it fills each micro-terraces from top to bottom, forming micro basins. The shallow water in the micro basins enables people to brake and change direction - just like on snow-covered downhill courses.

Creek Surfing attained German TUV certification in June 2010. For more information contact Sohret Pakis of Polin Waterparks and Pool Systems on +90 262 656 64 67 or Imre Rethy of Creek Surfing on +36 30 999 0 444.
